

Housing Association Activity Report 2017

@icsh_ie

Housing associations (also known as approved housing bodies, AHBs) provide social housing in communities throughout Ireland. In recent years, housing associations have been actively working to increase the number of homes they provide in response to the housing crisis. In 2017, housing associations provided 2,330 homes for social housing from a number of delivery streams. The Irish Council for Social Housing (ICSH) continues to support its members to provide much-needed homes and to overcome challenges to delivery.

Housing associations work in partnership with every local authority in the delivery of new homes with the common aim of reducing local authority social housing waiting lists. Below is a report on the output of housing associations in 2017.
