Scale | Innovation | New Housing Choices

The theme for the 2017 Biennial National Social Housing Conference is 'Social Housing –The Next Phase. Scale | Innovation | New Housing Choices'. This reflects the need to drive forward the delivery of social housing to the scale and extent that will provide homes to a growing number of households in housing need. The conference is set in the context of the review of the Government's Action Plan for Housing and Homelessness, Rebuilding Ireland after one year of implementation.

Rebuilding Ireland was aimed at fixing a broken housing system through measures to boost private housing construction, increase the delivery of social housing, improve the private rental market, utilise existing vacant units and address the growing problem of homelessness. A year on there are persistent challenges facing people who need a home. Homelessness, affordability of housing and lack of security and choice are problems which are enduring if not deepening.

Increasing the scale of delivery of social housing is clearly required. An investment programme of €5.35bn to deliver 47,000 units by 2021 has been earmarked for social housing. The Plan needs to ensure that this investment will translate into permanent homes for people in housing need whether they are families, single people or vulnerable groups such as the homeless, older people and people with disabilities.

Over recent years there have been a number of emerging initiatives and innovations that have been introduced to increase the scale of delivery. Bringing vacant housing stock back into use, innovative partnerships between local authorities and housing associations and greater use of private loan finance have provided additional tools to deliver solutions. However, there is still a challenge to reverse the dependency on the private market to increase the scale of new social housing delivery. The private market certainly has a role to play as choice is important, however experience has shown the private market is not a reliable source of housing for those on low incomes or with special needs.

The remit and range of Rebuilding Ireland demonstrates the commitment of Government to the housing problem. To deliver on the next phase of truly delivering scale and fixing this problem we need to increase our ambition for our housing system. The next phase will involve continued commitment from Government, the Department of Housing, Planning and Local Government, local authorities, approved housing bodies, the HSE, Housing Agency, Housing Finance Agency and other financial institutions as well as the private sector. A housing system that provides choice to people, affordable housing solutions and support for those who need it should be the goal of this next phase.

As such the objective of this conference is to challenge our current policies and debate solutions to develop our thinking in critical areas of affordability, cost, scale and innovation. Speakers from Ireland and abroad will provide insight from their own experiences and delegates will have the opportunity to deliberate on possible solutions for the Irish housing system.

Delegates wishing to attend the conference will benefit from:

- Networking with a broad range of colleagues and developing business relationships with key partners.
- Insightful presentations, case studies and sharing experience through plenary sessions and workshops.
- Understanding topical national and international policy, practice and learning.
- Learning from good practice demonstrated by exhibits from the Community Housing Awards as well as relevant suppliers and services for social housing providers.
- Participating in the debates and discussions at the wide range of sessions.
- Translating the learning from the Conference to your own organisation.
